Course Goals and Description. This course introduces and explores the history and contemporary experiences of Vietnamese Americans. Topics to be discussed include the Vietnam War, the history of Vietnamese immigration to the United States, assimilation, social productions, settlement issues (including, but limited to, mental and social health needs, education adjustment, and economic mobility), the changing role of Vietnamese women, identity, generation gap, media images, and transnational ties to Vietnam.

We will focus on the personal voices of Vietnamese Americans as means to explore the meanings of Vietnamese American experiences, mapping the making of "Vietnamese America" and the influence on mainstream America and abroad.

This course offers opportunity for students to link personal experiences to the larger collective facts of Vietnamese American History. This course will also provide opportunity for students to map the history of Vietnamese Americans in Houston, Texas.

Videos and readings in literature, history, psychology, sociology, and cultural studies will be assigned. Two exams and a class project will be required.

Required Text Books:

- Vietnamese Americans: Creating Diaspora and Destinies by Linda Vo
- A Course Reader compiled by Long Le.

The assigned readings are to be completed prior to attending class lectures. Assigned reading materials should be brought to class.

Course Learning Objectives: With completion of the course, students will have knowledge of the personal voices of Vietnamese Americans; of immigration and settlement issues; of the social and cultural productions; of the changing of Vietnamese women and identity; and of the making of Vietnamese American history.

The primary assessment of students' accomplishment of the course learning objectives is based on performance on essay exams and homework assignments. See Course Requirements.

To further facilitate the course learning objectives, the concept of critical thinking and active learning are introduced to provide the tools necessary for students to do well in the course and beyond.

1. Critical Thinking entails effective communication and problem solving abilities. In a paper, a class activity, a reading assignment, etc, students are encouraged to ask what is the purpose, what is the relevant information, what are the inferences and conclusions, what I am taking for granted, and what are the implications and consequences. See: www.criticalthinking.org.

2. "Learning is not a spectator sport." Active Learning is learning by doing. Students learn better when they are involved with their learning. The course's work assignments and activities are designed to acknowledge that students learn in different ways. See: http://tcmud.edu/active_learning/active_general.cfm

Course Instructional Objectives: With completion of the course, students will have a basic knowledge in doing "good analysis" and community-service learning on topics related to the making of Vietnamese American history.

The primary assessment of students' accomplishment of the course instructional objectives is based on performance on a class project and extra credit assignments. See Course Requirements.

1. Good Analysis requires the student to ask the "right" questions and then creatively but logically go about in answering them. See: Weiner & Vining's 'Policy Analysis: Concepts and Practice' (Prentice Hall, 2005).

2. Community Learning Service are encouraged to promote civic participation, build community capacity, and enhance the educational process. See: http://www.umich.edu/MLSCVC

Course Requirements:

2 ESSAY EXAMS: 50 percent of the final grade.
First: 25%
Second: 25%

A CLASS PROJECT: 30 percent of the final grade. You will map some aspects of the history of Vietnamese Americans in Houston, Texas. The objective is: to obtain a critical/analytical understanding on the making of Vietnamese American History in Houston, Texas. Students' contributions to this class project will be displayed to the general public. Students are highly encouraged to discuss and get advice for their individual contributions to the class project with the instructor before the noted deadlines.

An Outline of Student's Contributions to the Class Project: 10 percent and due anytime before Week 9.

A final Student's Contributions Project: 20 percent and due anytime before Week 16.

HOMEWORK: 20 percent of the final grade. Throughout the course, homework will be assigned to reinforce and assess the course's learning objectives.

EXTRA CREDIT: Up to 4 points added to the final grade. Throughout the course, extra credit assignments will be assigned to further assess, and reinforce, the course's learning objectives and instructional objectives. These extra assignments must be done in a timely manner, as specified by me. Please take advantage of this opportunity. Other requests to do extra work to improve your grade will be denied, please do not ask.
