List the student learning outcomes for the course (Statements of what students will know and be able to do as a result of taking this course. See appended hints for constructing these statements):
1. Develop a greater understanding and awareness of the histories, cultures, communities, practices and experiences of Asian Americans.
2. Use theoretical tools to: re-contextualize Asian Americans’ past and present experiences; to explore the relationship between the social world and the student’s sense of self; and to draw the connections between macro-structural processes and local conditions that affect their lives today. A special emphasis on developing critical thinking skills is an important component of the course.
3. Engage in rigorous theoretically informed discussions in a collaborative learning process drawing from reading assignments and lectures.
4. Write critically using ethnographic research techniques.

Competency areas addressed by the course (refer to appended chart for competencies that are required and optional in each component area):

- Critical Thinking
- Communication Skills
- Empirical & Quantitative Skills
- Teamwork
- Social Responsibility
- Personal Responsibility

Because we will be assessing student learning outcomes across multiple core courses, assessments assigned in your course must include assessments of the core competencies. For each competency checked above, indicate the specific course assignment(s) which, when completed by students, will provide evidence of the competency. Provide detailed information, such as copies of the paper or project assignment, copies of individual test items, etc. A single assignment may be used to provide data for multiple competencies.

Critical Thinking:
1. Students write a 5-6 page autobiographical essay exploring how their life experiences help them to reflect on larger social issues, and the value of qualitative description in the production of knowledge. Students are required to include various concepts.
2. Students interview participants and write a research paper using the excerpts of their interviews as data in order to explore a particular social issue affecting immigrant communities. Through the exercise students apply critical concepts learned in reading assignments. Students are required to submit transcribed excerpts of interviews and bibliography.

Communication Skills:
Students are trained in how to interview and establish rapport and to gather qualitative data through the interviews of individuals belonging to different ethnic communities. The purpose of the qualitative approach is not only to gather data, but also to learn how to communicate and interact with diverse communities in the U.S. based on information and knowledge from authoritative sources and personal experiences.

Empirical & Quantitative Skills:
Students are required to write a 6 page self-ethnographic essay paper related to such issues as: race, gender, sexuality, ethnicity, culture and society as well as learn from secondary sources at the library, and also to gather qualitative data through interviews of immigrant communities in order to address a particular research question. In addition, students are trained through class discussions to employ creative ways of analyzing and interpreting qualitative data obtained during the interviewing process.

Teamwork:
Students are required to organize in small groups for in-class discussion of reading materials assigned through the semester. Students are also required to take turns in presenting their individual viewpoints. Their participation will be evaluated based on two criteria: utilization of concepts learned through readings and discussions, and their ability to engage in creative dialogue with their peers.
Social Responsibility:
Students are required to engage in the implementation of interviews to learn about the issues and challenges immigrant families face, and to develop a more critical awareness of their social contexts. Students are expected to engage in creative ways to track social problems and the solutions that various communities are already implementing regarding education, gender, and family dynamics.

Personal Responsibility:
Students are exposed to the history and experiences of diverse ethnic communities in order to acquire better understandings of plural societies, critical skills to interact in diverse contexts, effective ways to valorize one's own cultural and social backgrounds, and the intellectual tools to lead a well adapted and productive social life.

Will the syllabus vary across multiple section of the course?  ☐ Yes  ☒ No
If yes, list the assignments that will be constant across sections:

Inclusion in the core is contingent upon the course being offered and taught at least once every other academic year. Courses will be reviewed for renewal every 5 years.

The department understands that instructors will be expected to provide student work and to participate in university-wide assessments of student work. This could include, but may not be limited to, designing instruments such as rubrics, and scoring work by students in this or other courses. In addition, instructors of core courses may be asked to include brief assessment activities in their course.

Required Texts

Supplementary Resources

- A copy of each of the required texts is available in the reserve section of the UH Library.
- Two additional books have been placed on course reserve:
- A reference list of related non-compulsory readings is included in this syllabus.
- Students will receive handouts and other electronic study materials free of charge in this class.
- This course outline and other electronically available study materials are accessible on Blackboard. Blackboard can be located via the following link on the UH website: https://accessuh.uh.edu/ Once you have logged on, you need to enter your CougarNet username and password. Under University Services, click on Blackboard and CUST 2300 will be among the course listings.
Course Overview

In an interactive teaching-learning environment, students will focus on the histories, cultures, communities, practices and experiences of Asian Americans. In the process, the following skills will be developed: (1) critical thinking skills; (2) communication skills; (3) empirical and quantitative research skills; (4) teamwork skills; (5) skills relating to personal responsibility; and (6) skills relating to social responsibility.

Standards

The course reflects the standards outlined by the National Association of Multicultural Education. The five standards involve the following key concepts: 1) inclusiveness; (2) diverse perspectives; (3) alternate epistemologies/social constructions of knowledge; (4) self-knowledge; and (5) social justice.

1. Inclusiveness
   - Represents the broad range of experiences and peoples that compose the population of the United States;
   - Acknowledges the ways multicultural experiences have contributed to the knowledge base, value systems, and ways of thinking within disciplines;
   - Provides an integrated understanding of human experience in its many varieties and complexities by attending to the exceptional as well as the ordinary;
   - Promotes understanding of the interdependence of groups and the reciprocal ways, both historic and contemporary, in which our collective experiences shape the lives of the diverse peoples in the United States.

2. Diverse Perspectives
   - Represents the multiple constituencies and points of view in the United States;
   - Encourages students to entertain competing constructions and understandings of social, historical, and natural phenomena;
   - Recognizes the ways these constructions are rooted in the cultural and historical experiences of the people who espouse them;
   - Facilitates independent, contextual, and critical thinking among students about what they have been taught.

3. Alternative Epistemologies/Social Constructions of Knowledge
   - Recognizes that alternative cultural constructions entail distinct ways of thinking;
   - Provides a basis for appreciating the differences in traditional ways of knowing, both the content of knowledge and the forms of evidence advanced to support it;
   - Sets out the paradigms and logic that structures knowledge within a community;
   - Provides the analytic tools students need to evaluate both the causes and the effects of traditional and alternative belief systems.
4. Self-Knowledge
   o Provides a structure that allows students to investigate their own cultural and ethnic identities and to examine the origins and consequences of their attitudes and behaviors toward other groups;
   o Leads students to a critical understanding and appreciation of their own cultural and ethnic identities, including both their strengths and weaknesses;
   o Recognizes that identity is based on multiple factors, including the diverse and sometimes contradictory realities of membership in multiple groups;
   o Fosters in students an understanding that identity is dynamic and therefore, that change is possible.

5. Social Justice
   o Emphasizes the constitutional rights accorded all members of our society and the responsibilities entailed by citizenship in American society;
   o Recognizes and upholds the statutes set forth by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations in 1948, in particular Article 26.2, that “Education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. It shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups, and shall further the activities of the United Nations for the maintenance of peace”;
   o Prepares students to “think globally and act locally” by fostering a critical understanding of the ways local knowledge and actions are situated within and have an impact on global contexts;
   o Provides students with opportunities to evaluate the results of personal, organizational, corporate, and governmental decisions and to develop a critical understanding of how such decisions may benefit some groups while negatively impacting others;
   o Promotes social action, creating an engaged, active, and responsible citizenry committed to eradicating bigotry and to developing a fair, just, democratic society.

Statement on Course Materials

Some of the readings, lectures, films, or presentations may include material that conflicts with the core beliefs of some students. Please review the syllabus carefully to see if the course is one that you are committed to taking. If you have a concern, please discuss it with the instructor at your earliest convenience.

Course Description

Several groups from Asia have traveled, traded, migrated, and settled in the Americas even before the 19th Century. As agents of sociocultural production, these groups have labored, struggled, and transformed what it means to be American. This introduction to the field of Asian American Studies explores some of the key issues and contexts that include history, ethnic identity, community formations, media representation, as well as race and gender relations. The subject matter is explored within the changing context of capitalism: from a Fordist to a Flexible Mode of accumulation and Globalization. The course is divided into three parts: Part I introduces a brief historical context to the binary West-East and the world system from the 1400s to the 1800s; followed by an examination of topics addressing the migration from Asia to the United States since the mid 1800s and well into the 20th century, ending with a discussion of the 1965 Immigration Act. Part II is framed in the context of post modernity, globalization and transnationalism. Students are introduced to influential readings on modernity, science and culture. Part III explores the most relevant topics available in current scholarship.

Course Objectives

In CUST 2300, students will:
- develop a greater understanding and awareness of the histories, cultures, communities, practices, and experiences of Asian Americans;
- use theoretical and analytical tools to: re-contextualize Asian Americans’ past and present experiences; to explore the relationship between the social world and the student’s sense of self; and to draw the connections between macro-structural processes and local conditions that affect their lives today. A special emphasis on developing critical thinking skills is an important component of this course;
- engage in rigorous theoretically informed discussions in a collaborative learning process drawing from reading assignments and lectures;
- write critically using ethnographic research techniques.

Integration of Technology

The use of technology is embedded in this course. In addition to connecting via Blackboard, students will engage in electronic library searches, find public websites documenting current Asian American issues, and make/view presentations that include document analysis or live video clips.

Class Sessions

The following are the general rules of the class:
- It is expected that you will be courteous to others (students and faculty). There will be a wide range of ideas, opinions, etc., expressed during the course and disagreement should be handled in an appropriate, professional manner.
- It is expected that you will be prepared for classes and that readings will be completed.
- For any makeup assignments, it is expected that you will provide adequate documentation. Documentation needs to be presented before assignments are due. The instructor understands that there may be unforeseen emergencies. In these cases, please inform the instructor as soon as possible and provide proper documentation concerning your absence once you return.
- Email communications about this class are to be written professionally (greeting, message, and salutation). For information on email etiquette, please refer to http://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/636/01/.
- Please allow at least a 48-hour period for email replies.
Accommodations

Individual accommodations can only be made upon the written recommendation of the Center for Students with Disabilities (CSD Building, Room 100). If you believe you qualify for one or more accommodations, please contact the Center at (713) 743-5400 for assistance. Also, please inform the instructor as soon as possible if you are requesting accommodations.

Incompletes

Students will not be allowed to take an incomplete in this course due to poor planning on their part. However, if you have a legitimate reason for an incomplete, please speak with the instructor as soon as possible to discuss the situation and to identify documentation that may be necessary for you to supply. Please review the University of Houston catalog to review conditions under which an incomplete may be granted as a tentative course grade.

Academic Honesty

The instructor will report and act on any incident of academic dishonesty. Penalties for such infractions may range from a lowered grade or failure on an exam or assignment, to probation or temporary or permanent suspension from the university.

Because instances of plagiarism are on the rise, papers will be submitted to Turnitin, an on-line service that compares your paper with others previously submitted for other courses around the country and on the web. Turnitin will evaluate the extent of overlap between submitted papers and those already in its database.

All students are expected to abide by the University of Houston’s Academic Honesty Policy in all matters concerning this course. In particular, plagiarism, "representing as one's own work the work of another without acknowledging the source," whether intentional or unintentional, and cheating on tests will not be tolerated. Any infraction of academic honesty will result in a grade of F for an assignment. All students should familiarize themselves with these policies to avoid any possible misunderstandings and/or infractions.

Religious Observance Policy

Please consult the UH website for information about the University’s policies regarding religious observances at http://www.uh.edu/graduate-catalog/policies/religious-holy-days/index.php

Course Assignments

1) 6-Page Essay—20 points

For this assignment, students will prepare a self-ethnographic report exploring issues related to race, gender, sexuality, ethnicity and culture. Students are expected to explore autobiographical writing as it relates to culture and society. The critical elements in this assignment include the ethnographic (thick description), the multiple (diversity) and the empirical (lived experiences). Citations and references are to be included when appropriate. Projected due date will be listed in class schedule. The grading protocol for this essay assignment is included in this syllabus.
2) 6-Page Research Paper—30 points

For this 6-page research paper, students will explore a particular aspect/issue of a specific Asian American community (topic approved in advance by instructor). This assignment is designed to increase student’s knowledge and critical understanding of the issues and challenges Asian Americans experience. It also enhances the student’s research skills and critical writing skills. The paper should include citations, references and a formal bibliography. The grading rubric for this research paper assignment appears later in this syllabus.

3) Group Discussions and Reflective Responses—10 x 5 = 50 points

Students will be organized in discussion groups for the duration of the course. These discussion groups are essential to the fulfillment of this third assignment. Students are expected to read assigned material before class and to attend each session ready to explore the topic/issues evident in the assigned reading in their discussion group settings. Further to this, dialogue between discussion groups in the class will also be promoted. Once a week, students will be required to write reflective responses to one of the two readings/discussions per week. In all, 10 written reflections will be submitted. A template outlining how these reflective responses can be written appears later in this syllabus. A scoring rubric for this assignment is also included.
